The experts in our Korea Business Centers worldwide help Korean exporters meet local requirements and provide personal services to foreign investors considering a location in Korea. The Internet has redefined the concept of national borders, accelerating the integration of the global market. The free flow of goods, capital and labor among countries is driving the fierce global competition that presents enormous opportunities as well as great threats. Today, it is such intangible values as human knowledge and creativity that count most, and it is in these areas that Koreans have immense potential. In meeting these changes in the global economic environment, KOTRA stands ready to help our customers overcome the challenges. Our worldwide network combined with our Internet homepage enables our current and prospective business partners to be in close contact with us 24 hours a day, seven days a week.
